PYP 3 –
English Asynchronous Task

Name: _____

Date: _____

Learning Objective: To identify and use prepositions of place and time accurately, and demonstrate understanding of creative writing skills

A thick, toxic haze settles over the city - stinging eyes, burning throats and sending air quality monitors into panic mode. For the past few days, the air in Delhi and its neighbouring satellite cities has hovered between the "poor" and "very poor" categories. It worsened sharply after Diwali, one of India's biggest festivals, as fireworks lit up the night sky and filled the air with smoke. Headlines reported that it was the worst post-Diwali air quality the city had experienced in the past four years. With that, the city once again found itself confronting its annual, predictable - yet avoidable - crisis: air pollution. There isn't a single factor to blame for the toxic air. It's a combination of events - firecrackers, vehicular emissions and the burning of crop residue in the agrarian states of Punjab, Haryana and Uttar Pradesh - that leads to the same outcome every year. And as it coincides with the start of winter, colder temperatures and low wind speeds trap pollutants close to the ground. Source: bbc.com

Task 1: Highlight or underline all the prepositions of place (e.g., in, on, near) in blue and time (e.g., during, at, in the future) in green.

Task 2: Complete the sentences using the correct prepositions: (in, on, between, over, with, to, for)

1. The air quality worsened sharply _____ Diwali.
2. The thick haze settled _____ the city.
3. The children could not play _____ the park because of the smoke.
4. Firecrackers filled the sky _____ bright colours.
5. The pollution is caused by a mix _____ many things.
6. The smoke got trapped close _____ the ground.
7. People are worried _____ their health.

Task 3: Imagine your friend lives in another city. Write an informal letter telling him/her about the current situation in your city — how the air looks and feels, what people are doing, and how it makes you feel.
